Article (6 bis)

Safety of Female Employees

1. The employer shall be committed to providing personal protective equipment (PPE) suitable for the nature of the work, taking into account the physical differences of female employees. The employer shall provide appropriate equipment or sizes for pregnant women whenever the nature of the work necessitates the same, in a manner that achieves effective protection and reduces occupational risks.
2. In the event the female employee notifies the employer of her pregnancy or breastfeeding period that requires special arrangements, the employer shall conduct an individual and specific risk assessment for her condition without delay, within a period not exceeding five (5) working days from the date of notification. Such assessment shall be reviewed regularly according to the developments of the condition, stages of pregnancy, or based on the medical recommendations issued by the attending medical authority.
3. Based on the risk assessment or recommendations issued by an accredited medical authority, or as may be required, the employer shall take appropriate measures to protect the pregnant or breastfeeding employee, including changing the working conditions or assigning her temporarily to alternative and safe duties that suit her health condition, without prejudice to her salary or prescribed rights.
4. The risk assessment shall take into account the identification of materials, factors, or working conditions that may affect pregnancy, breastfeeding, or reproductive health, and the taking of appropriate preventive measures regarding them.
5. The employer shall be committed to including awareness of occupational risks related to the health of female employees within the awareness and training programs related to occupational health and safety.
6. The inspection and guidance tools related to occupational health and safety approved by the Ministry shall take into account the considerations related to the safety of female employees.
